Horns – multiple point/antlers (moose)
Sharpened nails – (feline, demon)

Creating a creature entails choosing from the available traits, and building the race. The more traits taken from any given creature category, the more likely the creature is to be considered a member of that category. For example, a human with webbed wings, single point horns, and sharpened nails would be considered demonic. If that same creature had 3 traits that were common to another creature category, such as fae, the maker of the creature could choose from fae or demonic.
